

Rebalancing: The diversification defense

How rebalancing can help your portfolio weather volatility

Watching your portfolio's returns go up and down can be an emotionally trying experience. Rebalancing to a predetermined, diversified asset mix makes it so you don't have to worry about market instability as much. When you maintain the appropriate asset allocation, it can serve as a buffer against extreme swings in the market. As a result, you can feel more confident about your portfolio's ability to potentially preserve value in turbulent markets.

The chart below illustrates the point. Looking to the rightmost column of the chart, clearly the 60% stock, 40% bond (60/40) portfolio does not provide the highest long-term return. But over time, it emerges as being among the top few outperformers.

Notes: Cash investments are represented by the FTSE 3-Month US T-Bill Index. U.S. equities are represented by the Dow Jones Wilshire 5000 Index through April 22, 2005; MSCI US Broad Market Index through June 2, 2013; and CRSP US Total Market Index thereafter. U.S. bonds are represented by the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index through December 31, 2009, and Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Float Adjusted Index thereafter. Global stocks are represented by the Total International Composite Index through August 31, 2006; MSCI EAFE + Emerging Markets Index through December 15, 2010; MSCI ACWI ex USA IMI Index through June 2, 2013; and FTSE Global All Cap ex US Index thereafter. Global bonds are represented by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate ex-USD Index (USD Hedged) through December 31, 2012, and Bloomberg Global Aggregate ex-USD Float Adjusted RIC Capped Index (USD Hedged) thereafter. Emerging markets equities are represented by the Select Emerging Markets Index through August 23, 2006; MSCI Emerging Markets Index through January 9, 2013; FTSE Emerging Transition Index through June 27, 2013; FTSE Emerging Index through November 1, 2015; FTSE Emerging Markets All Cap China A Transition Index through September 18, 2016; and FTSE Emerging Markets All Cap China A Inclusion Index thereafter. Commodities are represented by the Bloomberg Commodity Index. REITs are represented by the FTSE NAREIT Equity REIT Index. Composite 60/40 portfolio's equity allocation consists of 60% U.S. stocks and 40% non-U.S. stocks, and bond allocation consists of 70% U.S. bonds and 30% non-U.S. bonds.

But something else very important is happening with that 60/40 portfolio. Historically, when the stock portion wasn't performing so well, the bond portion typically remained relatively stable (or might even have performed significantly better, depending on the period). This diversification benefit means that bonds may provide some cushion to your portfolio when the stock market hits a rough patch.

Indeed, you can notice in the chart that the 60/40 portfolio doesn't seem to bounce around as much—that is, exhibit as much volatility—as most of the other asset classes. Many investors feel it's worth it to accept lower returns in return for a reduced exposure to risk and instability, which helps them sleep better at night.

Let's say you had two hypothetical portfolios, each consisting of 50% stocks and 50% bonds. One of them you rebalanced regularly. The other you allowed to "drift," by not rebalancing. Over the course of 30 years, the rebalanced portfolio would have nearly 30% less median volatility than the untended one.¹ For people close to their financial goals or who just don't like risk, this can be meaningful.

If you have questions, we can talk about your portfolio's asset allocation and the rebalancing methodology we use to keep it on track.

All investing is subject to risk, including the possible loss of the money you invest. Be aware that fluctuations in the financial markets and other factors may cause declines in the value of your account. There is no guarantee that any particular asset allocation or mix of funds will meet your investment objectives or provide you with a given level of income. Mid- and small-capitalization stocks historically have been more volatile than large-cap stocks. Investments in bonds are subject to credit, interest rate, and inflation risk. High-yield bonds present higher credit risk than other types of bonds.

ETFs can be bought and sold only through a broker and cannot be redeemed with the issuing fund other than in very large aggregations. Investing in ETFs entails stockbroker commission and a bid-offer spread which should be considered fully before investing. The market price of ETF Shares may be more or less than net asset value.

All investments are subject to risk, including the possible loss of the money you invest. Investments in bond funds are subject to interest rate, credit, and inflation risk. Governmental backing of securities applies only to the underlying securities and does not prevent share-price fluctuations. High-yield bonds generally have medium- and lower-range credit quality ratings and are therefore subject to a higher level of credit risk than bonds with higher credit quality ratings.

There is no guarantee that any forecasts made will come to pass. Past performance is no guarantee of future results.

Prices of mid- and small-cap stocks often fluctuate more than those of large-company stocks. Funds that concentrate on a relatively narrow market sector face the risk of higher share-price volatility. Stocks of companies are subject to national and regional political and economic risks and to the risk of currency fluctuations, these risks are especially high in emerging markets. Changes in exchange rates may have an adverse effect on the value, price or income of a fund.
